

Abstract

A security document with a security element is described. The security element consists at least partly of a material that is optically changeable by an electric or magnetic field. In addition, a corresponding method for producing such a security document and a test method for testing such a security document are described.

Fig. 1

BEST AVAILABLE COPY